Summary of Search Rankings

Here is a look at the count of terms your site ranks for over time. This is a broad indication of how much coverage you have in search engines, and how this as changed over time.

Drilling deeper, here is a look at where the rankings fall, with rankings grouped into four cohorts: top 3 rankings, top 5, top 10, and top 20. They are inclusive – top 20 includes top 10 and the others – and so top 20 should have the most total search volume (x-axis) as well as the most terms that fall in that cohort (y-axis). Traffic does not really come until we are in the top 5 or top 3, and so it is the growth of those cohorts that ultimately results in success. Seeing rankings progress in that direction confirms that we are headed in the right direction – or, likewise, if rankings are consistently falling, that suggests a problem of some kind.
